To the Japanese People,

After the Great Tsunami that struck Japan, sunflower seeds sent from Japan were sowed in different parts of Nepal. These seeds were planted as a mark of respect and condolences to all the people that lost their lives in the tsunami. These seeds that have bloomed into splendid sunflowers symbolize the cordial and special relations between Japan and Nepal. Japan has always been a true friend of Nepal.

We here in Nepal, also went through a difficult time when a great earthquake struck our country in 2015 and took the lives of many. Both of our countries have been through some very tough and arduous times and the resilience and character shown by our people during these times was something that was common between the Japanese and Nepali people. These traits are highly commendable.

I would therefore like to express my sincere gratitude to Rarigurasu President, Akemi Mizuba, for her relentless efforts during the earthquake and towards building a long lasting relationship between our two countries. I would also like to offer my condolences and prayers to all the people that lost their lives in during the great tsunami in Japan and the great earthquake here in Nepal.

Warm Regards,

Prakash Man Singh
